Ron Hunka
Regional O.B. Producer

In last week's article, I brought out the point that an OB producer has rarely been heard to complain that his work is getting to be of a routine, or boring, nature. The reason behind this is probably that each assignment is completely different from the last, and therefore, the producer is offered a complete change of subject, faces, and location every time he undertakes another project. To give some idea of the variety that is encountered in working for Outside Broadcasts, I might just run down the highlights from the past year's schedule that saw Outside Broadcasts participation.

During 1958, the two producers based at Winnipeg covered, for national, regional and local audiences, such events as:

The Calgary Stampede. For the first time in history, "live" television originated from this world-famous attraction. Outside Broadcasts was primarily concerned with this "first," and as well was responsible for daily "live" radio reports and broadcasts that brought all the colour and excitement of this famous Outdoor Show to listeners from coast to coast.

The Churchill Excursion. An OB producer - commentator travelled along with a trainload of tourists and vacationers from every part of Canada and the United States to this far northern port to present a program based on this famous excursion special, as well as another on the port of Churchill itself.

Gold Rush Jubilee. The Yukon called late in 1958, and Dave Cruickshank travelled to the far north, visiting such places as Whitehorse, Dawson City, Alaska, and the many other romantic centres associated with the famous Gold Rush many years ago.

In the second of two articles, RON HUNKA tells how anything can happen on an Outside Broadcasts assignment —and how it usually does...

Christmas in the North. Outside Broadcasts boarded an R.C.A.F. aircraft in November, and stepped out a few days later in one of the farthest north centres in Canada—Resolute Bay, N.W.T., to record Christmas greetings and material from the hardy people who make their homes here.

Princess Margaret's Visit. Both OB commentators from Winnipeg were involved in this Royal Visit, accompanying H.R.H. to points from Banff, Alberta, to Hamilton, Ontario.

These are just a few examples, picked at random, that will serve to illustrate the variety in both subject matter, and locale, for Outside Broadcasts features. By and large, these various assignments are carried out in a fairly routine manner, but occasionally there will be a project different from the rest, and it is here that an OB producer must call upon all of his reserves, so to speak. These "reserves" may include anything from the ability to assist the technician in some problem in equipment or set-up, to the fortitude required to roll up in a sleeping bag under a flimsy parachute tent, while a raging northern blizzard whips the elements about his head. Certainly, the life of an OB producer would not be relished by a goodly number of people, for while it might appear that his job entails nothing but travelling about the countryside, taking in events and visiting places out of the reach of the average person, it is also true that he must endure a good deal of discomfort, frustration, and set-backs in carrying out an assignment.

As an example of this, I might cite the "Case of the Nickel-Mining Eskimos." Far up on the coast of Hudson Bay, several hundred miles north of Churchill, there is a community known as Rankin Inlet, where one of the North's largest nickel mines operates, manned almost entirely by Eskimo residents of the area. This seemed a "natural" for the Canadian Scene series, so late in November the writer, in company with a technician, boarded an airliner for Churchill, where connections would be made for Rankin Inlet. The day after our arrival at Churchill, a full-scale Northern blizzard set in, completely stopping further travel. Even to venture outdoors was a risky business, for the wind-whipped snow cut visibility down to a few feet, and to wander off one's path invited, at the least, a frozen nose or fingers. So, in the company of a deck of cards, we waited it out. One day passed, two, three, four. Almost a week went by, and we were no further along with our story than when we had left Winnipeg.

Then the weather cleared, but other setbacks took its place. The aircraft that was to take us to Rankin smashed a ski on landing, and was put out of action. What others that were available were booked to capacity. Time was rapidly running out, for the broadcast deadline was rapidly approaching. After a week had gone by, and we were no further along on our way to Rankin, we decided to forget about the story on the Nickel Mine, and concentrate instead on a story we could do out of Churchill itself. Here, too, we ran into difficulties. A $600 recording machine, set down along the side of a road while we offered our aid to a stuck automobile, was run over by another car that slid off the highway. (Luckily, no serious damage, thanks to the deep snow.) The Churchill Eskimos, several of whom we wished to interview, were just as shy as their northern cousins, absolutely refusing to have anything to do with us despite pleas, threats, and bribery. To cut a long story short, we returned to Winnipeg with about 12 minutes of material on tape, and with a 30-minute program to fill. Rather than forget about the whole thing and "beg off" the assignment, we went through miles and miles of tapes recorded months and years before in other parts of the north, hoping to find the material we hadn't been able to get in Churchill. The end result — the program went on as scheduled, completely different in subject and context than had been planned before—and the fat was safely out of the fire once again.*

Politics on the Air

A brief summary of the rules governing political broadcasts on CBC, with special reference to the current election campaign in Manitoba

By PAUL WRIGHT, Talks and Public Affairs Department, CBC Winnipeg

During the current Manitoba election campaign the CBC will provide a total of 4½ hours of free time on three networks for political broadcasts. (In addition there will be three-quarters of an hour on CBWT only). This makes a total of twenty-one 15-minute broadcasts. The networks include both the Trans-Canada and Dominion radio networks and the television network as far as Brandon.

You might be interested in knowing why this time is provided and how it is organized.

Under the regulations of the Board of Broadcast Governors is the following section, headed

Controversial Broadcasting:

1. The air belongs to the people, who are entitled to hear the principal points of view on all questions of importance.

2. The air must not fall under the control of any individual or groups influential by reason of their wealth or special position.

3. The right to answer is inherent in the democratic doctrine of free speech.

4. Freedom of speech and the full interchange of opinion are among the principal safeguards of free institutions.

When it comes to political broadcasting the CBC has found it easiest to apply these principles by providing a certain amount of time, free of charge, to be divided by agreement among the parties. Time cannot be bought. This gives all parties an equal chance, whether or not they are well supplied with campaign funds. To qualify for free program time a party must have run candidates in at least a quarter of the constituencies, have a recognized leader, a full range of policies, and a province-wide organization.

In practice the way this works out is as follows: When a legislature is dissolved the Supervisor of Broadcast Regulations in Ottawa is notified immediately. Working with other network officials and in consultation with private radio and TV stations concerned, he draws up a schedule of available network time. These schedules are presented to representatives of the political parties, who are asked to reach a common accord on the proportion of time going to each party. (During the present campaign the parties agreed to split the time in a 4-3-2 ratio).

TIME CHANGE

Many parts of Manitoba and Saskatchewan go on Daylight-saving time at midnight, Saturday, April 25. Listeners and viewers living in areas remaining on Standard time must deduct one hour from program listings in the CBC Times.

Since the entire province of Alberta remains on Standard time no mental arithmetic is required of Alberta listeners and viewers. However, most radio programs (and television programs on CHAT-TV, Medicine Hat and CJLH-TV, Lethbridge) will be heard one hour earlier than usual in Alberta.

LISTENERS AND VIEWERS ARE URGED TO CHECK CAREFULLY THE SCHEDULES IN THIS WEEK'S ISSUE OF CBC TIMES IN ORDER TO AVOID THE POSSIBLE DISAPPOINTMENT OF MISSING A FAVOURITE PROGRAM.

After agreement has been reached, attention turns to problems of production. Advice is made freely available to those appearing on television or broadcasting on radio. Producers hold meetings with the candidates and advise them on how to get their points over to the public.

And, as the campaign grows in intensity and pace as election day draws near, so are the broadcasts likely to, until, for different reasons, those involved at CBC are as keyed-up as the candidates—and just as relieved when it's all over.

Glamorous-maybe-but not easy

19-year-old Judy Shaw says a TV dancer's career is one of the toughest, most demanding a girl can choose

CBC dancer Judy Shaw has dispelled the illusion that a TV dancer's life is a glamorous round of parties, mink stoles and convertibles.

In a recent interview she revealed that the favourite after-show pastime of many CBC dancers is to soak their aching feet in a basin of epsom salts and hot water!

The 19-year-old blonde, who dances regularly on Cross-Canada Hit Parade and on The Wayne and Shuster TV specials, claims that dancing is one of the toughest and most demanding careers a girl can choose.

"Rehearsing for a show like Hit Parade, we work five days a week, often from 10 in the morning to seven or eight at night. It's hard work physically and you have to be in perfect condition all the time.

"You have to be on your toes mentally, too. For instance, during since she spent a summer on tour with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

a dance sequence several cameras may be used at different times. When you finish a complicated manoeuvre like a pirouette, you've got to end up facing the right camera and be sure that you're presenting your face and not your posterior to the camera."

There are some advantages in a dancer's life, according to Judy. She is pretty well her own boss. There is no nine-to-five grind. If she doesn't feel like working she doesn't have to. And the pay is good for dancers who work regularly.

But the road to success is one of continual training and grinding practice. Judy began taking dancing lessons when she was eight years old and has been dancing ever since.

In 1952, when she was 12 years old and attending Earl Haig Public School in Toronto, she danced on Canada's first TV show. "That was the most exciting thing that ever happened to me," she says. "I couldn't get over the size of the studio. It seemed huge to me then. It was all so new to me and when the producer yelled, 'let's take it from the top,' I thought he meant us to start dancing from the top of a staircase or ramp."

She got her first big opportunity when she was 14. One of the dancers in the Royal Winnipeg Ballet corps was injured and Judy was asked to replace her on an eight-week tour. She got leave of absence from school and went on tour in Eastern Canada and the U.S. Highlight of the tour for Judy was a performance before the Canadian ambassador at Washington's National Theatre, with the famed Alicia Markova as guest ballerina.

Judy lives at home with her parents in Toronto. Despite a heavy rehearsal schedule she manages to average about three dates a week. "I often have to cancel a date at the last minute when an unexpected rehearsal call pops up. The boys are nice about it. They say they understand, but I don't think they really do."

Judy's other interests are reading and collecting records. "My favourite composers are Rachmaninoff, Grieg and Offenbach. The only books I won't read are mysteries. I've read Somerset Maugham's novels several times and I enjoy Shaw and S. J. Perelman."

And Judy has one other hobby—soaking her feet after every show!

If we may infer that the preservation of human life is held as the criterion of a culture, how have we risen beyond medieval man? How high would medieval infant mortality have to rise before it became as culpable as a Nagasaki or a Hiroshima?—

TV "First" In Red Deer

Thursday, March 5, saw a "first" in Canadian Television at CHCA-TV in Red Deer.

Making one of her frequent visits to Alberta's Provincial training school (which is attended by approximately 800 mentally retarded children), CHCA's women's director, Marilyn Dorohoy, was surprised and delighted with the children's production of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs.

This was the latest of the annual Christmas presentations, attended by parents and a keenly-interested public in the Red Deer area. The play was directed, costumed and scored entirely by the teaching staff.

Closely associated in the past with the promotion of public education for a better understanding of the progress and problems associated with the instruction and development of mentally retarded children, the Channel 6 hostess immediately set about securing permission for and preparing a television performance of Snow White.

As part of the "Education Week" program on Channel 6, Snow White, was presented in the popular noon-time period March 5. The 35-minute production involving 9 set changes and the participation of 40 children (from "sense training" classes, which is kindergarten

HAVE MIKE, WILL TRAVEL

tractor, listening with one ear to the ice cracking ominously underneath, and with the other to the driver describing how he'd "gone down" the month before and had to swim for it.

- Flying blind in a snowstorm, almost hopelessly lost, while the pilot of the bush plane searched vainly for signs of the Alaska Highway that would lead to our destination.

- Trying to muster up the courage necessary to venture out of a sleeping bag into a refrigerated, 30-below morning, far up a mountainside in Northern Alberta.

- Fighting off the black flies in the summer on the northern tundra.

- Trying to be the first into the bathroom at the Calgary Stampede. (Due to lack of accommodation, we were sleeping eight to a room.)

All in all, the life of an OB producer is one that certainly will be the source of a lot of memories, happy and otherwise, when we're sitting in a rocking chair forty or fifty years from now. As a matter of fact, if things keep going the way they have been lately, we may reach that stage in a much shorter time.

Anyone care to replace us? The line forms on the right!

Eugene O'Neill

Some notes on the author of "Ah! Wilderness," to be presented from New York Tuesday on CBC-TV

HIS FATHER was an unstable, gambling but parsimonious actor; his mother was a morphine addict; his elder brother was a drunkard. He himself was just 18 when the Princeton University authorities asked him to leave; his wild excesses had completely disrupted his studies.

He married and had a son, then he left his wife to go prospecting—unsuccessfully—in Honduras. He alternated between long voyages to South America (in a sailing vessel), South Africa and Britain with drunken bouts lasting up to six months in the Sailors Opera in Buenos Aires (where there were cards and beer and women downstairs and pornographic movies above) and in a dive on the New York waterfront called Jimmy the Priests where he occupied a room for three dollars a month: "The house was almost falling down and the principal housewreckers were the vermin," he later said.

Then he gave up his life as a drifter but contracted tuberculosis and while in hospital began writing plays. He married again and interspersed his writing with drinking bouts with his brother. They drank their liquor "neat" at nights and in milkshakes in the morning.

His plays were produced and brought him honour and over a million dollars. He gave up drinking totally. But the police and censors attended those first nights and the powerful themes and crude dialogue made him many enemies.

The author, of course, was Eugene O'Neill and his best plays are probably the finest in American theatre literature. Despite the background from which they sprang, the author of Emperor Jones, Desire Under the Elms and Mourning Becomes Electra could say: "Most modern plays are concerned with the relationship between man and man, but that does not interest me at all. I am only interested in the relationship between man and God."

At their worst, O'Neill's plays become pessimistic melodramas; at their best, great tragedies. The constant tragic note, originating no doubt from his own upbringing and youth, sounded in his own life: one son committed suicide, another drifted aimlessly. His own health broke down in 1940 and tremors of the dreadful Parkinson's disease prevented the physical act of writing and he lost control over his voice; though he carried his illness with gentleness and courage till his death in 1953, those 13 years must have confirmed O'Neill in his tragic view of life.

In his posthumous Long Day's Journey into Night, which tells the story of his own pathetic family, O'Neill makes the hero (himself) say, "It was a great mistake, my being born a man. I would have been much more successful as a seagull or a fish"—this from a man who won three Pulitzer prizes and a Nobel prize for literature. But perhaps this very success was a cause of his pessimism. For he also said, "It is the dream that keeps us fighting, willing, living. Achievement, in the narrow sense, is a stale finale."

Naturally, O'Neill's friends see him in different ways. He was "shy and inarticulate in conversation"—he was "a sarcastic so-and-so." He was emotional but sensitive—he was a self-dramatist, always careful to see that published pictures should give him a tragic look. He was highly attractive to women but what he wanted in a woman (so he told his second wife) was "a wife, a mistress, a mother and a valet."

The stature of Eugene O'Neill as a dramatist is perhaps only now becoming clear. In the twenties

How "One of a Kind" Has Embarrassed the Critics

One of a Kind is embarrassing. Its popularity is enormous. In less than a year, it has become the fourth most popular Canadian TV show. It is nosing up to Hockey, Cannonball, and neck and neck with Front Page Challenge.

Yet critics have called it: "the worst new show of 1958" (Pierre Berton); "a suburban cousin of What's My Line" (Kildare Dobbs); and a show "where there isn't much in it for the viewers" (Denis Braithwaite).

Now that is embarrassing. Especially for the critics. Because viewers have found so much in One of a Kind, that during its first year of life, it has had the greatest audience increase of any live CBC show ever. That is what the audience research figures say. It has even outstripped the popularity-growth-record set by Front Page Challenge (with Pierre Berton) during its first year. It's all very perplexing. For the critics.

Take the way the audience is made up. Letters flood in to One of a Kind at the rate of up to 2,500 letters a week. They come from children. And housewives. And doctors, and lawyers, and shopgirls, and members of parliament. I received a letter from the premier of Nova Scotia, saying how much he enjoyed One of a Kind. I've received similar comments from a Montreal Art Gallery curator, and the chairman of the National Mental Health Association. Also from the Federal Minister of Finance.

I have also received a letter from a businessman saying: "Why are you wasting your time and mine with a child's parlour game." It is true that basically, One of a Kind is a parlour game. And children love it. But almost three times as many men watch it, too. Over three times as many women. Why? Some say they learn such a lot, it's educational; some say they like the dresses; some say they like us; most, I suspect, just like parlour games; and some people say they like it because it's so sophisticated. What! This romp of a parlour game, sophisticated? Celeste Holm, the Broadway actress, said to me: "I think it's more sophisticated than any show we have in the United States." A television producer from England called it the same thing.

It's all very perplexing.

And then, of course, there is the constant embarrassing charge levelled at us that we are "fixed." In the newspapers we read sarcastic letters to the editor: "Did the One of a Kind panel really get to George Bernard Shaw's beard through their brilliant questioning?" How can one answer that? Except by saying again and again: "we're not at all fixed." And by quoting two of our defenders: Yvon Durelle, the boxer, was a guest on our show, and afterwards said: "Nobody would believe down home that you weren't fixed. But now I'm going to tell them. You sure are not fixed. I know. Now I know." Ron Poulton, the critic and columnist explained it this way: "the successful answer is really the work of the whole panel since each question adds to the chain of

PROGRAM NOTES

APRIL 30

Nursery School Time

Songs and stories for tots, with Maman Fonfon. From Montreal.

CBWT—Mary Liz Show

Miss Sylvia Yacucha, a Girl Guide from Portage la Prairie, visits the show today to tell about her experiences at the International Guide Camp in Australia last fall. A Guide Leader, Miss Maisie Moon, helps launch Cookie Week in the province. With the help of a medical book written by John Wesley in 1774, Mrs. Lynne MacFarlane and Mrs. Dolores Booth examine some weird and wonderful remedies for complaints and diseases common to the eighteenth as well as the twentieth centuries.

Douglas Fairbanks Presents

This week—"Homecoming." A chance meeting with a little girl who accepts him without reserve as a friend, influences an ex-convict to return home instead of pursuing a life of crime.

Open House

Two special projects in Ottawa's public schools are examined—the teaching of oral French in Grade II and special physical training.

Speaking French

Professor Vinay continues his lessons in the French language.

Maggie Muggins

A visit to a pet shop where Grandmother Frog is on sale helps teach Maggie a lesson in selflessness. Maggie earns a reward for her kindness.

level, to "level 6," grade 5 equivalent), went off "without a hitch."

Dr. L. J. LeVann, medical superintendent, said, "I felt the program and the manner in which it was presented rated with some of the best seen on CBC-TV."

For all involved it was a heart-warming experience, and for the teaching staff of the P.T.S. it was a definite achievement in the public education of retarded children.

Many viewers, surprised at the ability of the children, commented on the efficiency of the production, its educational value, and its entertaining aspects.

For the remaining 750 students at the training school, it was "Television Day." Class programs were arranged so that all could enjoy the performances by their friends.

And for the performing children themselves . . . (who rushed to Marilyn with excited comments) . . . it was one of the most important and memorable occasions of their lives.

In reviewing the production with the directing teachers (Mrs. Velma Garden and Mrs. Kay McPhail) it was learned that Dr. LeVann plans to commemorate the occasion with a souvenir trophy and a party for the children.

"The excitement is over, but a fond memory remains of a Channel 6 first, and it is our hope that this beginning will lead to bigger things to enrich the lives of these retarded children and to broaden the outlook of all Parkland viewers," a CHCA-TV official has stated.

and early thirties he was the most powerful force in American theatre. Actors, directors and designers clamored to do his plays, which he turned out rapidly and in large numbers. In 1934 Days Without End appeared—then no new plays, though he did not take ill for another six years. A few revivals were not successful. Critics stopped measuring young playwrights against him.

In 1946 The Iceman Cometh went into rehearsal. O'Neill's star had declined so far the Theatre Arts magazine of October, 1946, thought it necessary to run an article reintroducing him to a new generation of theatregoers. But the new play did little to restore O'Neill to his former place.

In 1953, O'Neill died. Then three years later his posthumous work, Long Day's Journey Into Night, the story of his own family, had a triumphant reception, first in Sweden, then in New York. Critics called it another O'Neill masterpiece and the public flocked to see the drama. At the same time his The Iceman Cometh was successfully revived, and the New York Times wondered if an O'Neill revival had started.

At the very least, O'Neill has great historical importance in the American theatre. As the Theatre Arts magazine said, ". . . how badly we stood in need of a fearless, gifted, passionate, hard-hitting iconoclast to break through the conventions of every kind—spiritual, literary, social and technical—that hedged us in. It was the blare of O'Neill's trumpet that cracked the fortress walls."

But O'Neill's importance is much more than historical. His dramas are great theatre. The plays may be rough-hewn; but perhaps this is better than the slickness of some later American "realists." And the tragic element in his finest characters transforms them beyond the inverted sentimentality of a Stanley Kowalski.

Of all O'Neill's plays, only one can be called a comedy. He himself described Ah! Wilderness! as "a comedy of recollection." The play tells of the editor of a small town newspaper and his wife, and their problems in bringing up a family, particularly the youngest son, a brash but poetic young man who is in love and rebelling against his parents. One critic said of the play, "Unlike any other play O'Neill wrote, he put aside his

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP BOXING

Patterson vs. London

Once again a British fighter is trying for the world's heavyweight title. Britain's Brian London goes against champion Floyd Patterson in a 15-round bout at Indianapolis this Friday night on "Cavalcade of Sports." CBC television will carry the fight. London is the first British contender for the title since 1955 when Don Cockle lost to Rocky Marciano twice. Prior to that, the only British fighter to come close to winning the title was Tommy Farr who took Joe Louis, then at the height of his career, to 15 rounds.

Will Lowther, diving expert with the RCN and an associate of Jacques Yves Cousteau, the dean of underwater explorers, will be commentator.

Great Movies

Academy Awards

• This is to protest against the Annual Academy Awards program from Hollywood being broadcast over our CBC-TV network. The writer is very fond of showbusiness—so much so that she must protest the way an important ceremony of presenting awards is done. The ceremony is an extremely vulgar presentation, a large advertisement of poor taste, and a great show of materialism—all of which diminishes the prestige of winning an award to microscopic size. I would suggest that the network hire a producer who is determined to produce this program with dignity, good taste, and artistry. Forget about the number of stars appearing on the show and have just one well-known, highly respected actor or actress present the awards, simply, and in a dignified manner. Finally, hire comedians for variety and comic shows only—not for an important ceremony—and cut the time of the ceremony in half—if possible, cut to one third. C. A., Calgary.

• I would like to thank you for the Academy Awards telecast which I and many of my friends enjoyed last evening. However, I have one complaint regarding it. I would have liked to know why the complete show could not be televised. After all, during the Stanley Cup playoffs we are subjected to two and sometimes three hockey games a week which often last for two hours or more. Also the Folio production often lasts for two hours. Since the Academy Awards show is only on once a year I do not see why we cannot view the complete show. I listened to the first part of it over CBW and couldn't help wishing that I could see the personalities that were presenting and receiving awards. —Mrs. A. B. H., Winnipeg.

The only acting awards presented on the 45-minute portion carried only on radio were for supporting roles (winners—Burl Ives and Wendy Hiller). The other awards were for car- toons, documentary films, developments in projector bulbs, camera lenses, sound effects, etc.—hardly interesting visual material. If the full program had been carried it would have been necessary to drop (or break into the middle of) Desilu Playhouse which, besides being a popular program, featured on this occasion a special re-showing of a very highly acclaimed play—Rod Sterling's "Time Element."

"Times" Format

• I wish to tell you how well I like the new format and presentation of the CBC Times. If there were only some way to have, say, Monday's radio programs and Monday's TV programs on facing pages, that would be perfection. Anyway, the new style is a great improvement over the old plan. And thank you.—M. L., Edmonton.

—And thank you, and the many other readers who have endorsed the new system.

CBC Radio In Britain

British radio listeners will be able to sample Canadian radio programs during Canada Week on the BBC, May 30-June 6. The CBC is supplying the BBC with a lively assortment of recorded shows featuring classical, popular and folk music, talks, comedy and drama. These include the return to radio on May 18 of Canada's top comedians, Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster, who have been playing for television laughs exclusively since 1955. Classical music will include the May 3 concert by the CBC Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Geoffrey Waddington conducting a performance of Algonquin Symphony by Canadian composer Murray Adaskin. Canadians' preference in pop music will be represented in an hour-long concert by the Neil Chotem Orchestra of Montreal, and a forty-five-minute session by Toronto's Nimmons 'n' Nine. The CBC International Service will supply 12 three-minute folk-song recordings from its transcription library. Trans-Canada Matinee is contributing a program of excerpts from its best shows and a few specially-recorded items. The CBC Talks Department is also arranging for a round-table radio link, joining panelists in Canadian cities with a chairman in London. And British listeners will hear an all-Canadian drama—the April 26 production in the CBC Stage series of The Devil's Instrument by W. O. Mitchell, with Douglas Rain in a leading role.

MUSIC ON RADIO

by BOYD NEEL, Dean, Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto

ANNIVERSARIES come thick and fast. Besides the Handel celebrations this year, we are commemorating the 150th anniversary of the death of Haydn. Maybe the whole business is being stretched to rather absurd limits, because if one really sets about it, there is hardly a year where some sort of anniversary cannot be located.

However, the powers - that - be have decreed that Haydn be honoured this year, with some interesting results; one of them being performances of his opera Il mondo della luna, which I see is turning up at many of the summer festivals in Europe, including Salzburg. Usually we hear little of Haydn's operas and his chief fame has, of course, been as a composer of orchestral and chamber music. A few years ago, however, chiefly, I think, owing to the activities of the ill-fated Haydn Society which published records of his works, it was suddenly realized that this composer had also written great vocal works and the "rediscovery" of his Masses was an exciting experience. I think we are now generally agreed that the Masses have no superiors among works of their kind and belong to the very greatest music every written. I doubt whether the operas will follow suit. Although they contain much charming music, they are undramatic and suffer from bad libretti.

On Tuesday (replacing Montreal Symphony on Dominion and French networks) we shall be able to hear extracts from two of the operas: Il mondo della luna and L'Anima del Filosofo, which actually is the alternative title of Orpheus. This latter opera had a stormy beginning. During Haydn's visit to London in 1791, it was to have been performed at an Opera House run by an impresario named Gallini, but owing to the feud between this opera house and another one nearby, it never received a performance. Apparently, Gallini was unable to secure a license for his theatre and during the first rehearsal of Orpheus, officials arrived to stop the proceedings. Haydn had already been paid for the opera, so came out of the affair rather well, but it was a sad occurrence in a city in which Haydn was worshipped by the musical public and one can sympathize with him for stating that he found the noise of London streets insufferable and that he would move to the seclusion of Lisson Grove, a district immortalized, as you may remember, by Professor Higgins in Pygmalion and at that time far outside the boundaries of the city.

The other opera, Il mondo della luna, is most typical in this satellite age and no doubt many of the pro-

There comes a time when a film reviewer, subjected to mediocre or out-and-out bad films which are advertised and reviewed as masterpieces, must get rid of some of the hostility that he feels when he sits through one of these epics. You feel like getting up and going, but you must sit because something good might happen. You squirm in your seat, swear occasionally, or laugh out loud when the picture would like you to cry. Some Came Running is a film which has no more relation to reality than a bad comic book does. — John Hirsch, on CBW's "Passing Show."

Indian Conductor On CBC Symphony

After hearing about the awards and critical acclaim that Zubin Mehta has acquired in his musical career, it comes as a bit of a shock to learn that this Parsee Indian conductor is only 24 years old.

His father is India's leading violinist, so it's not surprising that the musical education of young Zubin began early. He continued his training in Vienna, home of the classics, and there created quite a stir last year when he conducted a concert devoted entirely to the music of Arnold Schoenberg, founder of the New Viennese school. Although the young conductor has actively promoted 20th-century music, he has also been praised for his interpretations of the old masters, in which he has been given a thorough grounding by Professor Hans Swarowsky, a close associate of Richard Strauss, and an authority on Viennese classics.

To broaden his education Mr. Mehta attended the famous summer schools in Sienna, Italy, and Tanglewood in the United States, where he developed his interest in contemporary music. His awards include the Austrian State Prize, and the First Prize at the International Conductors' Competition in Liverpool a year ago, which consisted of the post of assistant conductor for a season with the Royal Liverpool Philharmonic Orchestra.

On Sunday night he will conduct the CBC Symphony Orchestra, and on this occasion the soloist will be another brilliant young musician, Canadian pianist Ray Dudley.

Mr. Mehta is married to a Canadian musician, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lasky of Saskatoon.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Today—"Swiss Men Not So Crazy." The men of Switzerland recently went to the polls in a nation-wide referendum to determine whether to extend the franchise to Swiss women. The women were not given the right to vote. To Eric Nicol, noted Vancouver columnist, this is not such a medieval development as it may sound. Swiss men, he says, have blown "a resonant raspberry on their alpenhorns" and in this Matinee talk, he explains why.

Matinee today features the sixth in a series of eight programs of "Cooking School of the Air." It is entitled "Custards Around the Clock." No dessert is nicer, or more nutritious, than an elegant, smooth, creamy baked custard. But custards also make delicious, healthful main courses, especially at luncheon or supper. Eustella Langdon, CBC's cooking expert talks about custards and variations on the basic theme.

Another feature of Matinee will be the last broadcast in a series of four programs entitled "How Does Your Garden Look?" Today, Montreal's Mary Ferguson concludes her talks with some general statements about gardens.

Today's commentator is Tim Creery of Ottawa. Recorded music will be introduced by Pat Gallagher, and the reading by Charles Telling is from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

FOR MEN ONLY

ROD CONEYBEARE (above) is program planner, chief editor, writer and narrator on "Man to Man" to be heard Monday nights on CBW (10:30 p.m.), CBK (9:00 p.m.), and CBX (8:00 p.m.). Rod describes the program in no uncertain terms below:

I'D LIKE to have a man to man talk with you. Has there ever been a program on the air exclusively for men? No, you're darn tootin' there hasn't. There has never been a program on radio or television telling us how to tame women, how to fix cars, how to understand women, how to mix drinks, how to pursue women . . . In short, there has never been a program about the important things in life as far as men are concerned. Right? That's why this is a man to man talk. I want to tell you about a new program called Man to Man which you'll be hearing on CBC Trans-Canada on Monday nights, starting this week.

Man to Man will cater to men only and, of course, we expect there will be the usual hue and cry from the women.

"Anti-feminine!" they'll say - because on our first show we will explain to the men exactly who it is spends the money they earn.

"Women-hating!" they'll cry - because on the same program we will explode the myth that the wife necessarily owns half of everything in the house.

"You're insane sitting there listening to the noise of a car!" she'll yell when our auto editor, Lawrence Wilson, brings you on-the-spot road impressions of interesting new European cars (he'll be clues leading to the solution. Sometimes viewers miss some of the questions which set the answers up. I have no reason to suspect any panel show for this basic reason: producers recognize that a fixed show would be less spontaneous and entertaining than an honest one."

ONE OF A KIND

I think the most perplexing thing to most critics about One of a Kind is that they can't pigeon-hole it. What exactly is it? Is it a half hour of clowning? If it is, it shouldn't be. If it isn't, it should be. We have been criticized for being like Front Page Challenge and for not being like Front Page

Challenge. We are criticized for being like What's My Line, and for not being like What's My Line. We are criticized for being humorous, and for not being humorous. We are criticized for bringing in high-priced foreign guests, and for not bringing in high-priced guests. In fact, I think the critics have criticized everything, the set, the panelists, the moderator, the production, everything. But the embarrassing thing that perplexes the critics to distraction is that the audience grows and grows and grows.

Trends in Television

Peter McDonald, director of English network television programming for the CBC, spoke to delegates at the fourth annual television conference sponsored by the provincial Television Committee April 8 at the University of Saskatchewan. Theme of the conference was Trends in Television.

Present at the gathering were representatives of provincial organizations and private television stations. Panel discussions on programming and special problems involved in the planning of TV programs were scheduled.

Too Good to Use

For Christmas one of my friends gave me a dish towel—Irish linen with a map on it, picturing the old canals of England, boats with such names as "Water Gypsy" and "Betsy." I'm sure the towel would be excellent for drying dishes, but I hung it on the wall in the living room.—Jean Hinds, on CBK.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Matinee's education series, "What Goes in Our Schools?" continues with the third of six broadcasts. Today's program is entitled "Learning By Doing." Is the so-called "project method" as effective a method of teaching as the old lectures-and-note technique? This question has been hotly debated wherever persons interested in education congregate. Just what is the "project method" anyway? To find out, Toronto freelance broadcaster Marjorie McEnaney has taken her tape-recorder into a social studies project on Egypt in Queen's Park School, Calgary; into Assiniboine Primary School in Regina where a reading project was underway, into another Regina School where a creative writing project was in progress, and into other schools for a discussion of current events and a class in mathematics.

Today's news commentary is by Tim Creery of Ottawa. Pat Gallagher will play some more of her favorite recordings, and Charles Telling con-tragic mask and wrote it with a twinkle in his eye."

EUGENE O'NEILL

According to one story, O'Neill had just completed writing another play and decided to take a rest. But he woke one morning with the plot and characters so clearly in his mind he wrote Ah! Wilderness in a month and with only one draft.

Ah! Wilderness! was first presented in 1933. This Hall of Fame TV presentation, a salute to the playwright which illustrates his comeback, has Lloyd Nolan playing Nat Miller, the editor; Helen Hayes playing Essie Miller, his wife (Helen Hayes is currently starring in O'Neill's A Touch of a Poet on Broadway); and Lee Kinsolving playing the rebellious young son who no doubt is based on O'Neill himself. Robert Hartung wrote the adaptation for TV.

MUSIC ON RADIO

ductions this year will be geared in this direction.

On Sunday (CBC Concert Hall) we can hear six pieces from the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book. This book is so-called because it was left to Cambridge University by Viscount Fitzwilliam in 1816. It was known as Queen Elizabeth's Virginal Book, as at one time it was thought it might have belonged to her, but it was later proved that this could not have been so. It is one of the greatest treasures of English music and apparently belonged to an amateur virginal player named Francis Tregain of the early 17th century. It is in manuscript and is a kind of musical diary which gives us a complete cross section of the music of that period.

Tregain's name will go down in history, as not only was he the compiler of the Fitzwilliam Book, but also of a collection of over 1,100 madrigals and instrumental pieces which are in the British Museum and another smaller collection which is in the New York Public Library. He had a stormy life and ended up in prison where he died. The pieces we shall hear on Sunday are by a variety of Elizabethan composers including William Byrd and John Bull.

Also on Sunday (Chamber Music) we can hear an extreme rarity in Beethoven's Octet in E flat for wind instruments. Beethoven's works for wind ensemble, of which there are several, are very seldom played. This Octet is Opus 103 and came at a time in the composer's life when he was writing some of his greatest music. All the wind music of the 18th and early 19th centuries was written for performance outdoors and it is under these conditions that it should be heard for its full effect. The usual place of performance was the outdoor beer garden or public park and it is extraordinary how much immortal music was originally written for performance in such recreational locations.

On CBC Wednesday Night we can hear Handel's Samson from Ottawa. During this Handel year Samson has had quite a revival and was put on at Covent Garden as an opera with great success—our Jon Vickers taking the leading part. It contains much magnificent music and is such a welcome change from the everlasting Messiah.

Evelyn Rothwell

—Lady Barbirolli

When her school orchestra needed an oboe player, Evelyn Rothwell decided to become one, and that fortunate decision led to a brilliant international career that has taken her to Austria, Australia, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland. Recently she accepted invitations to play in South America, Finland and Canada, including a CBC Radio appearance in the Distinguished Artists recital series this Monday night.

In her native Great Britain Miss Rothwell broadcasts regularly, appears on television, is a busy concert artist, and has given numerous lecture-recitals with piano, including one called Round the World with an Oboe. From 1931 to 1939 she played with several famous British orchestras and with the Busch Chamber Players. She gave up her orchestral career in 1939 when she married conductor John Barbirolli. They share a love of collecting the 18th-century drinking glasses and furniture, and of watching cricket. He appreciates her photography, and she the fine art of his cooking.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

"The Hit Parade"—Children who listen to popular music—played loudly and at length—bring out the wrath of many a parent. Elinor Woods is no exception; she often finds herself with an urge to make kindling of the radio when she has heard the "top 40" at least that many times. Mrs. Woods is a housewife and freelance broadcaster who lives in St. James, Manitoba.

Today's program also features the second in a series of six talks by Barrie Clark of Vancouver entitled "The House That Barrie Built." Planning the type of house suited to the family's needs is one of the most important first steps when building a house. Barrie Clark discusses some of the aspects of planning—the kind of house a family can afford, the necessary components of every house, the selection of a builder, and the importance of exact specifications—in today's instalment. Included in his broadcast are interviews with Jim Houston, Vancouver branch manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, and Mark Smith, North Vancouver real estate agent. Mr. Clark is a Vancouver radio announcer and writer and a new home-owner.

Some facts, elementary and little-known, about foods we eat are included in today's "Consumer Broadcast" by Ruth Harding of Toronto.

Today's news commentary is by Isabel Wilson of Toronto. Pat Gallagher plays more of her favorite recordings, and Charles Telling continues his readings from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

PAUL KLIGMAN

former Winnipeg actor, gives pre-show instructions to 12-year-old Arnold Rose, who will make his TV debut in "The Littlest of Kings," Sholom Aleichem's simple tale of Jewish life April 21 on CBC-TV. Arnold plays the role of Isaac, an adopted orphan boy who, as oldest male in the home, has to preside over the family Passover service. Paul plays the Storyteller. The production marks the centenary of Sholom Aleichem's birth and the beginning of Passover.

"The Littlest of Kings"

How Rudy Dorn designed the sets

The visual setting of the story within 500 sq. ft. of Studio 7 floor space presented quite a challenge to those involved, particularly designer Dorn. At Harvey Hart's first production meeting the idea was considered of using a fully abstract, "in limbo" approach, with light only. It was later decided that because of the importance of environmental factors in the story, a semi-realistic approach would be best, providing a glimpse of the structure of the village with low-key lighting emphasizing its time-worn quality.

Dorn pointed out that his sets have been designed as a series of pictures which together will convey the atmosphere of the story, not as an attempt to recreate the entire village in the TV studio which would be impossible, let alone impractical. He has made the Passover setting the nucleus of the design. The women 'round the table mentally relive their lives in the village and the story-teller speaks their thoughts. The cameras are able to move freely, viewing the table group and following the women's thoughts through the village from various angles and in various types of shots—close-up, wide-angle, medium and long-range. Various cameras will be used: The Monster (a TV camera mounted on a crane), two pedestal cameras, and the monorail camera first used last December in CBC-TV's presentation of The Nutcracker ballet.

Dorn said that the woodcuts in Sholom Aleichem Panorama, published as a labour of love by M. W. (Melech) Grafstein, editor and publisher of The Jewish Observer, London, provided great inspiration for his set designs and were invaluable as regards his achieving authenticity. The sets, however, are a reduction all around, with an eye to technical and budgetary limitations. Some of the charmingly curved roofs in the woodcuts would have been very expensive to construct, for example, so Dorn straightened them out without losing the essential character of the buildings. Another important part of the setting is a hill constructed in the centre of the studio over which a funeral procession proceeds in the story.

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

This is Mental Health Week. Today, Matinee will mark it with an actuality broadcast, "Back to Normal," by Marjorie McEnaney. During the last two years, the Ontario Hospital for the Mentally-ill at Whitby has conducted a successful rehabilitation program for its out-patients. With her tape-recorder, Mrs. McEnaney visited one of the hospital's approved boarding homes and talked to several of the patients who reside there. Mrs. McEnaney is a Toronto free-lance broadcaster with a special interest in health and welfare subjects.

Another feature on today's program will be Kathleen Teltsch's report on what's new "At the U.N." Kathleen Teltsch is a United Nations correspondent for the New York Times.

The news commentary is by Tim Creery of Ottawa, and the musical portion of the program will be handled by Pat Gallagher, who will play some of her favorite recordings. Charles Telling returns with another reading from Fred Allen's "Much Ado About Me."

FOR MEN ONLY

driving and talking at the same time).

"Listen to those idiots lifting those weights!" she'll sneer icily as our 'physical man' editor investigates local gymnasiums to see how and why we brainy men of the world can and should keep in shape.

The fact is, an hour isn't enough for Man to Man. There's so much to cover that should be covered every week, but we'll do our best. There will be items on sports, clothes, food, manners and morals—our second program deals mainly with drinking and courting practices in Canada and offers advice on how to avoid breach of promise suits, and sports. There will be shows dealing with The Bachelor, Husbands of the World, How to be a Father—we can go on forever unless the women get us banned!

As I said before, we're on CBC Trans-Canada on Monday evenings. We feel this is just as well.

TED KOMAR

leads the band Monday nights on The Georges LaFleche Show (8 p.m. on CBW, 11:30 p.m. on CBK, and 10:30 p.m. on CBX).

You can go down to your workshop, or upstairs to a bedroom, and hear us while the rest of the family is occupied with the TV set.

Man to Man will be bright, often frivolous, but I think you'll find it contains solid information and thoughtful discussion of a sort that's rather different. This isn't just a publicity gimmick—it is for men only. The little woman will be intrigued and listen to the first show, but halfway through our first automobile item, she'll yawn. From then on the program is yours. We're sure you'll enjoy it.

Roman Circus In Hollywood

JOHN HIRSCH, on CBW's
"Passing Show"

Well, the great day is over. The losers by now must have cried their eyes out and said all the nasty things they could about the winners who in turn must still be clutching their Oscars in their hot little hands.

I caught some of the mammoth show on television and I must say it was pretty impressive in a horrible fashion . . .

There was Jerry Lewis ("one of the funniest men alive"—according to his press agent) having all his jokes fall flat with a dull thud; Kim Novak, appearing in a gown which was like a bead curtain; and the star who sang There's No Business Like Showbusiness in a creation which was an exact replica of the dress our cousin Merle got married in (around 1930).

And there was Ingrid Bergman saying lovely things to a crowd of people who just a short time ago hated her entrails but now gave her an ovation with at least a gallon of the milk of human kindness gushing in all directions. There were three slightly worn stars singing a more than slightly passé song, studded with the names of nominees. Every time a name was mentioned the camera brought the face of the star into close range, and I could almost hear the pleasantries that must have passed through the brain behind the politely frozen face.

Next morning there were two ladies seated behind me on the bus, and I tried to catch their remarks about the Roman Circus of yesternight . . . "The men looked unshaven . . . and I just loved Susan Hayward I mean the really sincere way she said thank you and —." Here we passed over a crater on our up-to-date city-scape and the bus' groans muffled some of the dialogue. ". . . but at least this year she wore a dress . . ."

Alas! I shall never know who came to last year's presentation au naturelle.
